

Community Living Windsor's Commitment to Privacy

Community Living Windsor has a long history of respecting the rights of our members. We hold personal information about members to help us meet legal requirements and to communicate events or news of interest to the membership. This information can include names, addresses, telephone numbers, and email addresses which we obtain directly from our Membership Application completed by each member or other information given by members from time to time, the purpose of which is specified.

Community Living Windsor only collects information that we absolutely need, specifically for the following purposes:

- To understand your needs and to develop, offer, and manage supports and services that meet those needs;
- To meet legal and regulatory requirements.

Please note that your membership in Community Living Windsor automatically makes you a member of Community Living Ontario.

Community Living Windsor does not sell or transfer membership lists.

Community Living Windsor does not disclose names and addresses of our membership, except as legally required, or unless a member has expressly consented for us to do so. You can limit or withdraw your consent at any time, subject to legal or contractual obligations. For example, Community Living Windsor is required by law to provide a record of membership upon completion of the requirements of the Ontario Corporation's Act.
